

Where are you with AI?

Circle the answer that is closest today. There is no right answer.

☐ I have barely tried it

☐ I tried it. Mixed results.

☐ I use it and want more

☐ I build with it

Paul says: “There is no right answer here. I want to know what the room actually looks like.”

Purpose: start with the owner’s actual starting point. Phone optional. Paper works too.

Which message would you trust?

FICTIONAL DEMO. These are authored teaching drafts, not customer research or a test result.

Draft A

“Quality. Integrity. Excellence. We care about your comfort. Contact us today.”

Draft B

“AC quit? Tell us what happened. We’ll explain the next step and confirm the visit price.”

☐ A · Quality. Integrity. Excellence.

☐ B · AC quit? Tell us what happened. We’ll explain the next step and confirm the visit price.

☐ I need more information

Paul asks: “Which company would you call?”

Same fictional business. Same next step. No price, response time, result, or customer preference is claimed.

Pick the next job.

Circle what would make tonight useful to you.

☐ A message customers understand

☐ A follow-up I keep putting off

☐ Notes, quotes, or admin

☐ Help me find a useful first job

Paul asks: "Would you actually use that?"

One job is enough. The room chooses the direction. Jimmy and Paul make the final fit call so the example stays safe and useful.

Would you actually use it?

Judge the result. A skeptical answer helps us choose a better job.

☐ Yes. I could use that

☐ Yes, with a few changes

☐ Not yet

☐ Show me how it fits my business

Paul says: “A tool earns its place by making one job clearer, not by sounding impressive.”

A draft is not a sent message, published page, invoice, legal decision, or changed record.

Make Friday easy.

Pick one small next step you can actually try.

☐ Understand a customer better

☐ Improve a message or page

☐ Give a helper one clear job

☐ Ask Jimmy and Paul where to start

My Friday job: _____

First step: _____

I will check: _____

Paul says: “Pick one small thing you can try Friday morning, before the week gets loud again.”

If you want help, Jimmy and Paul will explain how to book a short conversation. No deposits tonight.

If the phone room goes quiet

Keep the room moving.

Phone failure

Hand owners the matching card. Paul takes a show of hands. Jimmy keeps the stage example moving.

Wi-Fi failure

Use the venue-approved fallback only if it was tested. Otherwise use these cards and the offline stage deck.

AI delay

Show the labeled fictional drafts and explain the method. Never present a saved example as a fresh live result.

Projector failure

Paul reads the prompt. Jimmy reads the two drafts. Owners circle answers and write their Friday plan.

Keep these lines handy

- “Phone optional. Paper works too.”
- “Use a fictional example if you are unsure.”
- “That is a draft, not a promise.”
- “What would you check before using it?”
- “Would you actually use that?”
- “If the answer is no, that helps us choose a better job.”

Do not put client names, private records, confidential legal details, policy details, or passwords into the room.
